Abandoned, but Not Forgotten

Do you think the cicada remembers its abandoned shell? Highly doubtful. It is just part of the maturing process. So why do Christians spend one moment thinking about their “old lives” once they have transitioned into beings of God’s Kingdom? But we do, and too many moments for sure. We may even wish to go back. If the cicada did, it would mean death. The same is true for us. Time to abandon AND forget, and fully embrace a new life in the Kingdom of God, which began the day of your confession of faith! —Torrie Osgood
